Project Bullyish Film Wins, NYPD Updates About Stalking Case

New York, NY, January 18, 2025 – New York City Actress Lillee Jean Trueman has won again with her cyberstalking, and cyberbullying documentary film Project: Bullyish. The project won at KIIF in Los Angeles, with Best Director being awarded to Trueman.

Since the outstanding win, Trueman has updated fans in the coming weeks with the ongoing criminal police reports she filed with the NYPD. As of August 2024, deepfake explicit nudes were created of her body and plastered across X, YT, TWITCH, the dark web, and Discord servers of YouTubers from the USA to Internationally. The accounts had her name on them, and the imposters went on to write business contacts as “Lillee Jean”. The NYPD as of September 2024 subpoenaed several accounts on X, YT, TWITCH, the dark web, and several Discord servers containing the black-market deepfaked photographs. The deepfakes bring a new level of criminal offenses against Trueman and her family. That same month, a member of the Lillee Jean Clone Cult was indicted on espionage charges by the FBI.

As of January 2025, Trueman’s identity has been stolen again. Her full name has been used to create medical appointments to intimidate her, receive car loans, sign up for college courses, as well utilizing federal resources such as the the United States Army to apply as “Lillee Jean Trueman”. Further identity theft includes writing Trueman’s agent as Lillee Jean, from a Google Mail account. It is imperative for people to know Hello@LilleeJean.com is Trueman’s only way of contact, along with her personal cell. The District Attorney is aware of and active in stopping the nonstop identity theft. An investigation is being conducted, as this crosses international lines.

You can watch Project: Bullyish, which documents a series of straight out of a Hollywood screenplay quality stalking here.
